Tweet! Tweet! Dry mouth education poster a winner

The British Dental Journal Tweet said it all: 'BDJ prize winner! Margaret Stacey from Melbourne for her poster on dry mouth education for GMPs! Congrats!'

Dr Stacey, from the Melbourne Dental School, and her project team received the BDJ prize for the best practice-based research and evidence-based poster at the International Association for Dental Research General Session and Exhibition in Seattle this year. The project had received the the inaugural IADR Colgate Community-Based Research Award for Dental Caries Prevention in 2011.

The competition was judged by the BDJ Editor-in-Chief, Dr Stephen Hancocks, who considered both quality and relevance of the research presented, in addition to the clarity of communication.

On top of that, the PREVENT study successfully created and used a model which helped General Medical Practitioners (GMPs) to identify their patients at risk of dry mouth, diagnose dry mouth and implement a dry mouth management program that included improved communication between GMPs and dental professionals.

eviDent thanks the project team for the invaluable contribution that they have made throughout the course of the project. The project could not have run so smoothly without the enthusiasm, dedication and professionalism of the project team and the practices who participated in the project.
